

Nate Gatten is Senior Vice President – Global Government Affairs at American Airlines. He leads American’s government and regulatory affairs teams and oversees the company’s advocacy in Washington and across American’s global network.

In this role, he defines the company’s government affairs priorities and directs the development and execution of the efforts to advance American’s public policy initiatives. His team works closely with American’s operations, commercial, communications, and legal teams in Fort Worth to drive a consistent message to elected officials, public policy makers, and key influencers.

Previously, Mr. Gatten was Managing Director and Head of Global Government Relations at JPMorgan Chase & Co., where he led the government relations and policy teams globally, and served as the organization’s primary representative before Congress, the White House, and international policy-making bodies.

He holds a bachelor’s degree from Willamette University and earned a Master of Business Administration degree from the Booth School of Business at the University of Chicago.
